Translated by John Howard Foreword by Ari Roth Identity in crisis. This is best-selling author Peter Sichrovsky's territory. What makes the Vienna-born Sichrovsky turn to Jewish love stories after his landmark books of interviews with German and Austrian children of Holocaust survivors, Strangers in Their Own Land (1986, Basic Books) and children of Nazis, Born Guilty (1988, Basic Books) are common threads of feeling lost, misdirected, repressed, estranged, haunted, or shamed. These are love stories where love is a bitter pill, a joke, a missed chance at happiness, a secret, a ghost, or a longing to be with a person one cannot even remember. Sichrovsky writes without embellishment, spare outlines of characters that feel familiar, and infuses them with dark humor and tragedy in equal force. With characteristic inquisitiveness and provocation, Sichrovsky shows he can deliver a delightful and absurd collection that entertains and inspires us to tears, laughter, revelations. Stories, among others: In Prague an adolescent Jewish boy struggles when his Communist parents renounce their affiliations upon Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia just as he is about to land a date at the local Communist club. The Love Schnorrer follows a hapless, depressed man leaving his wife and children to secretly emigrate with a Jewish partner, but he is deceived. In The Sirens a young couple in Israel—a native Brooklynite and she an Israeli-born doctor—struggle to keep their marriage and family together under Saddam Hussein's latest rocket attack. Berlin, Holiday, and Pigs Blood have an autobiographical aspect. Interviews, interrogations, and captive audiences all reveal aspects of the author's curious career and iconoclastic personality.

Together this collection of eleven short stories forms a shattered mirror, the individual shards of one mythic prior image: Jewish identity. Can it still exist?

Can it ever be made whole? Peter Sichrovsky is an Austrian journalist, author, and former politician. He was a foreign correspondent between 1986-1996 for publications including Stern Magazine, the Sueddeutsche Zeitung, and Profil. In 1989 he co-founded Austria's liberal newspaper Der Standard, where he served on the editorial board for several years, and from 1996-2004 was a member of the European Parliament. He is the author of eighteen books, including many acclaimed books based on interviews Strangers in Their Own Land: Young Jews in Germany and Austria Today Born Guilty: Children of Nazi Families (adapted into over fifteen foreign-language theatrical works), Incurably German interviews with German neo-Nazis, and Abrahams Children: Israel's Young Generation. Playwright and theatrical producer Ari Roth is the Artistic Director of the new Mosaic Theater Company in Washington DC. He is a two-time NEA playwriting grant award-winner, has received four commissions from the Foundation for Jewish Culture as well as being two-time recipient of the Avery Hopwood Award. Roth served as Artistic Director of Washington DC's Theater J from 1997 to 2014.
